

RAILAY BEACH

Krabi Province (Thailand)

Railay Beach is a climber's delight. This stunning beach is to be found on the Andaman coast of Thailand and is also known as Rai Leh. Located in Krabi Province, the outstanding fact about Railay Beach is that its landscape is full of dramatic cliffs and mountains, which makes it popular with those who enjoy climbing.

This beach forms a peninsula which includes 4 different areas: Rai Leh East, Rai Leh West, Ton Sai and Phra Nag. This peninsula is incredibly peaceful because it is isolated from the mainland of Thailand and inaccessible to cars. There are a number of different beaches, as mentioned earlier. One thing you will notice about Railay Beach is that all the areas are quiet. This is place popular with climbers, families and explorers, not people who are looking to party as in many other tourist spots in Thailand.

This is a gorgeous place for swimming and sunbathing in comfort. The beach is known for its large "sleeping Indian" rock, a natural rock formation which resembles exactly that. Another name for this beach is Sunset Beach. If you are here in the late afternoon, you will experience an amazing sunset like you have never seen before.

Railay Beach has a wealth of spectacular views, this particularly from the cliff tops and the mountains. The towering Phra Nang cave is a favorite spot to visit.

The trip to Railay Beach is long and somewhat complicated. You can begin by flying to Phuket or Krabi. Boat is the only means of transportation to the resorts in this secluded area. Come to Railay to experience and conquer this place with us.
